A COLORED physician of Bruns wick, Ga. claims his race is degenerating as one result of freedom, owing to their proneness to vice and neglect. of hygienic laws. The ligures he has gathered from the vital statistics of 300 Southern towns show that the death rate among negroes is double that of the whites in the same communities, while the rate of birthy is also smaller. He attributes this de generacy to the carelessness, lack of forethought and dissipation unfortunately so characteristic of the colored population in the South since the war. He says that in ante-bellum days the negro seemed to be immune to consumption and that the enforced temperate living and sanitary preeautions of the masters in slavery days had made the black man a physical giant which his own proneness to vice is rapidly under-mining, and that fine physical specimens of the race are much scarcer than they were 20 years ago.
